Shadman, Kristin

Kristin Shadman is an assistant professor in the Division of Pediatric Hospital Medicine at the University of Wisconsin. She completed her medical training at the University of Connecticut and her residency at the University of Rochester. She seeks to systematically improve the care of hospitalized children through safe, consistent, and effective delivery of evidence-based care using quality improvement methods. Specifically, she has focused on bronchiolitis, asthma, eating disorder management and the infant safe sleep environment in hospitalized settings.
