On behalf of Weill Cornell Medicine and NewYork-Presbyterian, the Department of Pediatrics is seeking a physician leader for the position as Division Chief, Newborn Medicine and Director, Neonatal Intensive Care Unit. Reporting to the Department Chair of Pediatrics, the Division Chief will advance the clinical practice of Newborn Medicine at Weill Cornell Medicine and NewYork-Presbyterian Phyllis and David Komansky Children’s Hospital, provide mentorship to basic and clinical researchers in the Division, and foster education of medical students, residents, fellows, and peers. The chief will lead and grow a diverse Newborn Medicine Division that includes programs in collaboration with the Departments of Obstetrics and Gynecology, NYP Morgan Stanley Children’s Hospital NICU, affiliated NICUs at surrounding hospitals, and other divisions within the Department.

The Division Chief will direct a busy NICU and expand services within a distributed network of affiliated hospitals and clinics. S/he will be provided the resources to attract, recruit, and retain top clinician, scientist, and physician-scientist talent. The Division Chief will maintain a close collaboration with leaders at WCM and NYP to include strategic planning and development and resource management.

The ideal candidate is a physician leader with experience in the application of new knowledge to the practice of clinical medicine and a track record of successful leadership in the field. S/he will be a nationally respected academic neonatologist or equivalent. Because the next Chief will be the leader of a growing and complex clinical enterprise, experience in leading successful programs is critically important. The Chief must exhibit the qualities required to be a successful leader in a complex, matrixed environment, including the ability to work collaboratively across the various organizations, and effectively promote the Division with community providers and leaders, donors, and hospital executives.
