The Department of Pediatrics at Weill Cornell Medicine/NewYork Presbyterian Hospital is seeking a physician-scientist leader for its Division of Pediatric Nephrology. Reporting to the Department Chair of Pediatrics, the new Division Chief will advance the clinical practice of Pediatric Nephrology at Weill Cornell Medicine (WCM), provide mentorship to basic and clinical researchers in the Division, and foster education of medical students, residents, fellows, and peers.

The Division Chief will lead and grow a diverse Pediatric Nephrology Division that includes programs in collaboration with the Nephrology Division of the Department of Medicine, the Rogosin Institute, and the renal transplant service of the Department of Surgery. It is also expected that the Chief will foster the development of collaborations with the Division of Pediatric Nephrology at the Morgan Stanley Children’s Hospital at NewYork Presbyterian/Columbia University campus.

The Division Chief will direct a busy Nephrology service that includes 4 board certified pediatric nephrologists, will be expected to expand services within a distributed network of affiliated hospitals and clinics across three NYC boroughs (Upper East Side and Lower Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn). S/he will be provided the resources to retain, attract and recruit top clinician, scientist, and physician-scientist talent. The Division Chief will maintain a close collaboration with leaders at WCM and NYP to include strategic planning and development and resource management.

The Department of Pediatrics at Weill Cornell Medicine includes thirteen (13) academic subspecialty divisions and 145 full-time faculty members. There are also 300 voluntary faculty members on the academic staff of the department. The Department functions within the NewYork-Presbyterian Phyllis and David Komansky Children's Hospital, a full-service, multidisciplinary "children's hospital within a hospital".

Interested candidates should send cover letter of interest and CV to Dr. Gerald Loughlin at gml2001@med.cornell.edu.
